

Summary

Ritecz, György: The impact of terrorism on tourism (3-61)

European people - in a wider sense, most of the world's inhabitants - so that the lives of tourists are increasingly affected by terrorism and terrorist acts. The study examines whether and to what extent the dissuasive effect of terrorist acts on tourists and tourism revenues can be demonstrated.

Németh, Gyula: The challenges that endanger the road transports in relation of the terrorist attacks in Europe (62-72)

Recently the traffic safety of our country is more and more appreciated, and fortunately permeability of the road network has been increased and its quality is also constantly evolving. At the same time the number and performance of the vehicles has been multiplied in the last few decades. Between these circumstances traffic accidents may have many victims and serious consequences, especially if trucks or dangerous good carriers are involved in the case or used by terrorists. The publication aims to describe endangering sources of the road transport safety, the regulations that can minimize chances of accidents, and the vehicles, as possible tools of the terrorists causing harmful attacks against persons in public areas.

Koncsag, Katalin: From an interrogator's point of view – Denial of the testimony between relatives (73-124)

Principle of legal certainty – A principal right, which has to be respected by the court, and during the investigation as well. The job of the enforcement is to guarantee the uniform manner during the whole process, including the testimonies. However, real life brings us cases that are not regulated by the law and cause trouble during the investigation. Using practical experience, the author points out the deficiencies of the (new) Hungarian regulation and with de lege ferenda suggestions she shows alternative solutions to the identified problems.

Sallai, János: In Memoriam Dr. Pál Déri retired police brigade general (125-134)

Dr. Pál Déri headed the editorial staff of the periodical Interior Review (Belügyi Szemle) for 25 years. His life was imbued with socialism and his active career was intertwined with the periodical. He edited the predecessor of today's Interior Review and assisted at its beginnings. His editorial and scholarly activities are equally remarkable and can serve as an example for young people involved in scientific research. The article discusses Dr Pál Déri's courageous but hard life, from the training course for commissioned police officers to the title of Doctor of Science of the Hungarian Academy of Science and his being promoted to retired police brigadier general.

Tóth, Nikolett Ágnes: Seven decades in law enforcement - Remembering the life of Professor Géza Katona (135-151)

Prof. Dr. Géza Katona was a police brigadier general, lawyer, a Doctor of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences, an exceptional talented scientist with an exemplary career path. He has been an internationally acknowledged and authenticated expert in law enforcement. and one of the most prominent personalities in the development of the criminal technology in Hungary. I made the last interview of his life, the enlarged version of which you can read in this publication.

Hautzinger, Zoltán: Policing in Constitutional States - Thoughts on the university textbook Police Science by Géza Finszter (152-158)

The volume Police Science written by Géza Finszter provides its reader a summary overview of the researches in police science since their commencement in 1990. Not only does this work introduce its readers to the concept or the interpretation of substantive law, it also reveals knowledge, with a critical approach but within the framework of a university textbook, which may carry importance for training law enforcement professionals. In addition to the introduction of the above volume, the present paper also deals with sharing views and thoughts on certain criteria of constitutional policing.